

Many of today's life insurance products offer living benefits and enhanced features that you don't have to die to use. Your clients may be able to use their life insurance coverage to help offset the cost of chronic illness or long-term care by accelerating a portion of the death benefit to help cover these expenses. Better yet, these features can even help cover temporary chronic illness expenses that would not be considered life-long conditions.

CASE STUDY

- James is a 55-year old male looking to provide financial protection for his family.
- He purchases a $500,000 guaranteed universal life policy and elects an additional level of protection with a chronic illness rider.

James has choices to help him design his policy to best fit his needs:

1. Monthly benefit payout options of 2%, 4% and an IRS per diem benefit that is annually adjusted for inflation.¹
2. The benefit can be elected anywhere from 50% to 100% of the death benefit.

James chooses the 2% monthly payout option on 100% of the death benefit.

Five years later, at age 60, James suffers an unexpected stroke. While it is severe, it appears that his chances of recovery are good. His wife remembers the flexibility of their life insurance policy and thinks it might pay for expenses related to his current condition.

THE STRATEGY

Covering Expenses with payouts from chronic illness accelerated benefit riders.

Since James has been certified as unable to perform at least two of the Activities of Daily Living (ADLs) without substantial assistance from another person, he will qualify for:

- Payment of $10,000 per month in chronic illness benefits, which are designed to be received income-tax free.²
- Continuing life insurance benefits reduced by the chronic illness benefits paid.
- At death, any remaining life insurance benefit will be paid to Luke's beneficiaries income-tax free.³

The family is relieved that this financial weight will be lifted off their shoulders.

¹ 4% maximum benefit in California.

² Based on current federal income tax laws, policy owners should consult a qualified tax advisor

³ Death Benefits are generally excluded from a beneficiary's federal taxable income under most circumstances and current federal income tax law.

COMING OFF OF CLAIM

Thankfully, due to improved health, James is able to come off claim 2 years later at the age of 62. His guarantee remain intact, there is no catch-up premium and there is a prorate reduction and recalculation of premium on the remaining death benefit.
